Switch between the default browser and a second browser on your system using this free Mac OS X utility. KEYMACRO Features: Installs to: /System/Library/Frameworks/CoreServices.framework/Versions/A/Frameworks/LaunchServices.framework/Versions/A/Support/KeyMacro.app/Contents/MacOS/KeyMacro Does not run as a daemon. If the installation is successful, run the included KeyMacro.app program to use the utility. By default, the utility sets the default browser to Firefox. You can also change which browser is the default browser to Safari, Internet Explorer, or Firefox. To do this, follow the instructions included with the application when you run it. If you do not, you will have to switch your system to one of the browsers that it is configured to use. To change the browser to one that is not already in use, the Default browser list should be listed under System Preferences > Internet Setup. You can then manually change it to Safari, Firefox, or Internet Explorer. Click on KeyMacro and a list of the installed browsers will be shown. Choose the one you want to use as the Default browser. This will be the browser that you use to find URLs when you are in your web browser. If you have many browsers on your system, you can set a particular browser to use as the default browser. To do this, use the Default Browser Preferences option within System Preferences > Internet Setup. If you want to manually change the Default browser, go to the Preference application in /Applications/ and select the Default browser. You can also set the Default browser to use the /System/Library/Frameworks/ApplicationServices.framework/Versions/A/Frameworks/URLStorage.framework/Versions/A/Resources/Default Browser/ directory for the Default browser. If you do, Safari will be the default browser. The Default browser can be set to use the /System/Library/Frameworks/ApplicationServices.framework/Versions/A/Frameworks/WebKit.framework/Versions/A/Resources/Default Browser/ directory for the Default browser. This will use Firefox as the Default browser. When you use the Utilities/Manage Default Browsers option, each of the available browsers will be shown. Click on the browser you want to use as the Default browser and select the Default browser using the + button. This will change the browser 80eaf3aba8
